

HALLOWEEN HERE QUIET, BUT MERRY

Festivities Apparently Unaffected by the Passing of Sailors From the District.

CROWDS WALK STREETS

Halloween reigned supreme last night.

Before the mystic evening had scarcely begun, it was evident that Kine Alcohol was really going to have very little to do with Halloween itself. The children's festival by adherents of Jolly King Cole and his ilk did not materialize.

Halloween had the upper hand and kept it downtown until midnight, while in private homes throughout the city the spirit of Halloween did not wane until even a later hour.

Crowds Walked the Streets.

Shortly after 6 o'clock last night the crowds began to gather—and walk—on the downtown streets. By 8 o'clock the flow of pedestrianism was at its height on Pennsylvania avenue, 9th, 11th and 14th streets and other main thoroughfares.

Masked and costumed children were much in evidence, as were young men and women costumed for the evening's fun.

It was a big, good-humored crowd, the component parts of which tramped the streets for hours looking for something to happen that never happened. There have been livelier Halloween celebrations in Washington.

Despite the fact that the crowd was big, it did not seem to reflect the approximately 50,000 people who have come to Washington since the war began. The corner at 9th street and Pennsylvania avenue was a scene of activity, but even here the crowd was not so great as some expected, considering that the night was both Halloween and a farewell to alcohol.

The fact that the nation is at war, and that Washington is the capital of the nation, undoubtedly had a sobering influence. There was very little rowdyism shown anywhere.

The absence of confetti was noted. Washington never has been very strong on throwing confetti, but in past years there has been quite an amount of it flung around on Halloweens.

Costumes and Masks in Evidence.

"Tinklers" and horns did not sell as usual, either. Costumes and masks did business as usual, evidently, although "Charlie Chaplin" suits were few and far between. Fewer mustaches sold well, large numbers adorning both male and female upper lips.

One fellow wheeling a baby carriage along Pennsylvania avenue attracted attention. The baby had a neck at least a foot and a half long. The infant was made of cardboard.

French soldiers, in their distinctive tailored uniforms, afforded a dash of color to the throng.

About 90 per cent of the crowd, especially on Pennsylvania avenue, consisted of young couples and old couples who were out to watch the antics of the children, the youngsters being disguised one way or another.

Police Kept the Lid On.

Police were much in evidence and had the crowds well in hand all evening. Whenever anything "exciting" seemed about to happen, up would come a "cop" or two, and the normal flow of pedestrians would be restored.

"Uncle Sam," an old man claiming to be an old soldier, was making a patriotic speech at 10th street and Pennsylvania avenue about 8 o'clock. Finally the crowd grew so dense that the police decided to take Uncle Sam into the toils, much to the indignation of the crowd, many of whom asserted vehemently that "nothing" was going on.

Across in front of the Post Office Department building went the officers with the old man, followed by a crowd of about 500 people.

Tooting horns and other noise-makers were much in evidence all during the evening. However, nothing of the hooded of many automobiles. An old wagon, that seemed about to collapse any moment, was driven up Pennsylvania avenue early in the evening—possibly a Halloween joke of some kind.

WIDOW HAS FIVE SONS IN UNITED STATES SERVICE

Mrs. Lottie B. Jones, Colored, Making Flag to Bear Stars Showing Unusual Response to War.

Mrs. Lottie B. Jones, colored, seventy-two years old, a resident of Tenleytown, soon will be the possessor of a family service flag that will float from the roof of her home. It will contain five stars, each star representing a son she has in the United States military forces. Mrs. Jones is making the flag and expects to finish it early next week.

She is the widow of John B. Jones, who was lighthouse keeper at Old Point, Va., during a period of thirty-seven years and who died a few years ago. "I have five sons who have offered their lives for their country," she said, "and two more who are willing to go any time they receive a call."

One son is J. W. Jones, who recently resigned a position as detective on the local police force, and is now at a training camp in Iowa and was appointed captain. Paul W. Jones, another brother, resigned from the police force, went to the training camp in Iowa and is now at Camp Meade as a lieutenant.

A. Cateby, A. Jones and Thomas L. Jones, two other brothers, are chief petty officers in the Navy, while Warren W. Jones is at a training camp. The other brothers are Dr. William Jones, who formerly was in the Navy, and John Jones, of Hagerstown, who is a railroad engineer in Brazil.

FROLIC AT TYLER SCHOOL.

Community Center Entertains on Halloween for 500 Children.

The Tyler School community center, the youngest organization of its kind in Washington, held its first frolic at the Tyler School, 11th and I streets southeast, last night. More than 500 children and young people, most of them in Halloween costume, crowded the lower floor of the school building. So dense was the crowd that no attempt was made to carry out a proposed program of songs, instrumental music and stories, but an abundance of ice cream and cakes was served to the funmakers. The school rooms were decorated by Clifford Lanham, superintendent of parks for the District. The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. John V. Adams, president of the community association, and Mrs. Allan Davis, secretary.

Demonstration of the Rengo Belt Corsets Attracts Women Who Are Hard On Corsets

Stretched and broken corsets call for replacement—often a second or third in a single season—where stout figures give severe wear.

Not so with Rengo Belt Corsets—they are the strongest and most substantially made garments ever designed, due to the exclusive Rengo Belt feature of tailoring over the abdomen and hips. They will hold their perfect style lines until thoroughly worn out—most women discard their older Rengo Belt garments only when the styles change.

Thus in the purchase of Rengo Belt Corsets you may acquire all you have ever desired in style and comfort, and at the same time practice "present-time economy." Boned with double watch spring steels. Per pair, $2.50 to $5.
